

The Hortobágy Puszta

The Hortobágy Puszta, sometimes referred to as the Great Plains, are Europe's largest natural and continuous steppe landscape.

The region is a unique example of the harmonious symbiosis of man and nature. The natural parkland offers enormous biological diversity on its alkaline heaths, meadows and small marshes, providing a home to the 342 species of birds living and nesting here, as well as the migratory birds that pass through in autumn.
