

Early Christian catacombs in Pécs

Thanks to its historic, cultural, artistic and spiritual legacy, Pécs is one of Hungary's most exciting towns. The southern city with a Mediterranean atmosphere was known as Sopianae in Roman times. What is more, it was the administrative centre of the province of Pannonia in the late 3rd century. The two-level construction of the early Christian burial chambers here make them unique to all of Europe. Dating back to the 3rd and 4th centuries, they contain fully intact wall paintings of extraordinary beauty.
