

The historical diversity of Budapest

Budapest is one of the the most attractively situated cities in the world. The Danube splits the city in two: The rolling hills of Buda to the right and Pest extending on the flat, left-hand shore of the river. The palaces on either side of the Danube and the historic Castle District on the plateau of Castle Hill are together listed as a UNESCO World Heritage Site. The spectacular bridges over the Danube are particularly impressive when illuminated at night.
