

The Buda Castle

The southern end of the narrow plateau of Castle Hill is dominated by the enormous Royal Palace. The centre of the Castle District is marked by the pointed spire of the Matthias Church, while narrow cobbled streets reminiscent of the middle ages make for a pleasant walk to the north. The Fisherman's Bastion directly behind the church was built in the late 19th century with walls and turrets in the style of a fairytale castle. The neo-Roman construction is without doubt one of the iconic views of Budapest.
