

The Art Nouveau Museum

This unique building in the Budapest city centre was built in 1903. It belonged to Béla Bed , the wealthy owner of a paint and glue factory who also possessed copper mines in Transylvania. Bed 's considerable financial means allowed him to construct what was at the time a very modern building with the help of architect Emil Vidor. Although he originally envisaged a residential block for rent, Béla Bed eventually moved in with his family, his lawyer, his chauffeur and the company office. The widow of his grandson continues to live here among the original interiors.
