

1. The historic Buda Castle District and its view across the Danube

Budapest is one of the the most attractively situated cities in the world. The Danube splits the city in two: The rolling hills of Buda to the right and Pest extending on the flat left-hand shore of the river. The palaces on both sides of the Danube and the historic Castle District on the plateau of Castle Hill are together listed as World Heritage Sites. The spectacular bridges over the Danube are particularly impressive when illuminated at night.
