

Esztergom

This city on the banks of the Danube is the seat of the cardinal of Hungary's Roman Catholic church. Built around 970, the castle on the location of today's cathedral was the birthplace of St. Stephen, Hungary's first king and founder of the Hungarian state. Today, the hill is the site of the Esztergom Basilica, the country's largest church. The enormous building was rebuilt in the classicist style in the first half of the 19th century to include the perfectly preserved Bakócz Chapel, which dates back to the 16th century. The basilica treasury contains a wealth of religious relics from the 16th century and later.
